Interviews on California Primary Available through Wednesday, June 9th

(June 4, 2010– Sacramento, CA) – With less than one week until the California Primary Election and over $100 million spent on campaigns, voters continue to be confused and election-weary. Inundated with rhetoric via ads, mailers and robo-phone calls, many voters are still struggling to make sense out of things on important ballot issues and races.

To help decipher the technical language and political spin, widely-respected nonpartisan political analyst Gary Dietrich, Citizen Voice Co-founder and President, is available through June 9th, the day after the election. Gary is available for interviews via:

- Phone for live and recorded interviews
- Skype for live and recorded interviews
- In-studio in the Sacramento region
- Via satellite from PACSAT

In addition to media interviews, Citizen Voice's 2010 Nonpartisan Election Project has developed a simple toolkit for this June's Primary Election. Voters can go to www.CitizenVoice.org to find:

- Free access to lively "mini-debate" videos with both sides of the propositions, moderated by widely-respected, nonpartisan broadcast political analyst and co-founder of Citizen Voice, Gary Dietrich. These debates are also offered in audio format, and
- Easy-to-understand audio and written summaries (in English and Spanish) of all the statewide propositions.
- Other voter helps like candidate info links, finding polling places, etc.

Citizen Voice, a nonpartisan movement that inspires, informs and involves citizens in the public arena, is responding to voters' need for clear, concise, nonpartisan analysis of California's statewide election with groundbreaking nonpartisan online election tools. The 2010 June election features five statewide propositions and voters will be asked to make some very important decisions, yet there are precious few nonpartisan resources to help voters.
