CITIZEN VOICE HELPS ELECTION-WEARY CALIFORNIA VOTERS BY OFFERING FREE NONPARTISAN VOTING TOOLS

Public Service Announcements Available to Guide Voters to Nonpartisan Information at www.CitizenVoice.org

(May 13, 2010– Sacramento, CA) – Citizen Voice, a nonpartisan movement that inspires, informs and involves citizens in the public arena, is responding to voters' need for clear, concise, nonpartisan analysis of California's statewide election with groundbreaking nonpartisan online election tools. The 2010 June election features five statewide propositions and voters will be asked to make some very important decisions, yet there are precious few nonpartisan resources to help voters sift through the rhetoric while their mail and e-mail boxes fill up daily with election propaganda.

To help decipher the technical language and political spin, Citizen Voice's 2010 Nonpartisan Election Project has developed a simple toolkit for this June's Primary Election. Beginning May 1, www.CitizenVoice.org will make available free access to lively "mini-debate" videos with both sides of the propositions, also offered in audio format. As an important addition, nonpartisan, easy-to-understand written summaries of all the statewide propositions will be available. "People are overwhelmed and frustrated by the amount of biased information pushed at them about candidates and propositions," Dietrich observed. "Our goal is simple -- provide credible, easy-to-use, statewide election information to answer the questions that really hit home to California voters."

To guide listeners to Citizen Voice's web site, www.CitizenVoice.org, for these free resources, public service announcements have been developed (see below) for use.

The Web site has become a very useful tool for voters over the past few election cycles.

- CV had over a quarter of a million hits on our website for the 2009 CA Special Election
- In October 2008, Citizen Voice received over 1 million hits on its website prior to the November election and over 80% of website visitors bookmarked the site as a favorite.
